'DEACONS' EJECTS WOMEN SLEUTHS

CINDERELLA BRIDE SAYS BROWNING IS SEEKING TO 'INTIMIDATE' HER

New York, Feb. 2.—Charges of intimidation were made against "Dashy" Browning by his girl wife, "Peaches," and her mother, Mrs. Carolyn Heenan, following an alleged attempt by two women detectives to enter their apartment.

Mrs. Heenan, a well-known actress, told Police officers, Henry K. Brown, that she recognized the women as those of private detectives employed by Browning. They were ejected by a woman in the apartment house at No. 17 West End avenue, where Mrs. Heenan and her daughter lived.

"One of these women came to our front door and said she wanted to see us about a something very important," Mrs. Heenan said.

"We told her she could come in and while we were talking to her the other woman tried to enter by the back door. We ordered her out and then I called the doorman. This bold attempt is doubly an affront by Browning to me as I know I cannot laugh."

GIRL, SHOT BY SUITOR, HAS CHANCE TO LIVE

Bill on the floor, but making a blunder, fell for life. Miss Florence, daughter of Mr. Vernon street, Dorchester, was twice by her mother, married sister, John Finnell, who, a moment later killed himself with the same weapon, now has a good chance of recovery at City Hospital.

One of these bullets, which struck her in the chest and took a downward course, has been removed. Another that struck in the shoulder, is still in her body, and no attempt will be made to remove the bullet later. Miss Finnell is conscious and today was able to see members of her family.

FULLER WINS HIS FIRST FIGHT ON LIGHT RATES

Gov. Fuller and Representative Henry L. Cabot Lodge, leaders in the movement to lower gas and electric rates, won their first skirmish today through the Legislative Committee on Power and Light.

The committee voted unanimously to support a bill empowering the Public Utilities Commission to initiate proceedings for reduction of rates charged by power, light and water companies.

As the law now stands, the Public Utilities Board can take no initiative action, but can act only after twenty customers of a company, or the mayor of a city or board of selectmen of a town petition.

Under terms of the bill proposed, the Public Utilities Commission would have a complete check on the rates of all utilities and would be empowered to reduce rates at any time and without the necessity of a petition.

Legislation—and at present it is necessary for an order against high rates to go to the expense through a law suit to the gallery of the Commons when involved was charged a rate that was excessive and that the dividends paid were too high.

Chaplin Was Careful of Home Expenses

By Mildred Harris.
(Copyright, 1927, by Mildred Harris. Reproduction, whole or in part, prohibited.)
Mildred Harris, first wife of Charlie Chaplin, in her fourth installment, tells of their home life in Beverly Hills.

I was not so very different from other girl brides when I went to live in Charlie Chaplin's home in Beverly Hills.

I dreamed and thought so much of having our own home or planning pretty things for it, of entertaining my friends and my friends.

But I soon found that Charlie was not so interested in his home as I was. I mean, in the little things, the planning together for new curtains or new rugs or new flowers in the garden.

Sometimes when I suggested some thing for the house, he would laugh and say, "Charlie, let me see. I'll think it over."

POLICE LINK MATHESON SLAYING WITH 4 OTHER GIRL-SLUGGING CASES

A fourth girl has been slugged by a night prowler armed with a piece of lead pipe since the murder of Maybelle Matheson, it was learned today, when twenty-year-old Bella Shapira of No. 109 Lawrence avenue, Roxbury, disclosed that it was this sort of attack that put her in City Hospital.

Although Miss Shapiro, employed in a Roxbury department store, declared that she was taken to the hospital in a police ambulance after the assault, no report of the attack was made by the police at the time—last week.

Model Examiner Timothy Leary today was called by the police to interview one of the "slugged" girls and inspect the weapon found by the police near the scene of the attack, in order to learn if there was a connection with the Matheson case.

Description of the slug as given by Miss Shapiro, showed almost exactly the same as the one which attacked Maybelle Matheson last night when she was slugged on the street.

The four girls slugged since the Matheson murder are:
Mrs. Bella Shapira of No. 109 Lawrence avenue, Roxbury.
Mrs. Sula Foster, Magnolia street, Roxbury.

SLUGGER OF 4 HUNTED IN
W. ROXBURY SLAYING

occurred between 11:15 and 11:30 p. m. in Holman street, Roxbury, Mass. A few steps away from 1150 W. Roxbury, where traffic from the street is heavy at that hour and where many pedestrians pass.

The medical "slugger" who attacked the Roxbury woman is believed to have used a piece of lead pipe which was found near the scene of the attack. Police believe he may be the murderer of Maybelle Marshall, as well as the same man who attacked women recently in the East End.

He narrowly missed capture at the scene of a shooting crowd after he struck down Miss Queney in the street, early in front of her home.

After police arrived at the scene of the attack on Miss Queney, they found the man of the pipe about 100 feet away and about 100 feet in diameter.

QUERY MacRITCHIE

Police inspectors today questioned Angus MacRitchie, owner of the murdered West Roxbury girl, for three hours after his arrival here from Nova Scotia, where he went to his home.

Following this questioning at the police station, MacRitchie was taken to the police station, where he was questioned by the police.

MacRitchie's sister, Mrs. MacRitchie, who was with him at the time of the shooting, was also questioned by the police.

"Mr. and Mrs. MacRitchie have been very careful and have been very valuable in helping the police," said Assistant District Attorney McDonald, who was his only comment, and that was his only comment, and that was his only comment.

McDonald revealed today that an eighteen-year-old man, living in Holman street, directly opposite his home where Maybelle Marshall was murdered, has been questioned at the police station.

"This boy is Donald Macdonald," said McDonald. "He is a part-time musician, but has worked only about five months in the last two years, according to his own statement."

MOTHER RETICENT

"In the course of checking up on everybody in the neighborhood, we found this man. Just to be careful we sent a man, not a police officer, to inquire if he was there. His mother would not tell him, but the father spoke of him, so we really reached him. We sent a man to return him."

"At the end she inquired: 'Are you a policeman?' Her father said he was not. Later we saw Donald."

"He said the first he knew of the murder was at 8:30 Saturday morning, shortly after the body was discovered. He said he heard his father telling his mother of the body as it lay in the field."

"He said he looked out the window and could see the body and the group of people gathered around it. He did not go out there. He took at times an about 2:30 went out but did not go into the field. He did not walk over and look at the body."

"The first he knew of the identity of the body, he told us, was four days later. Now, Maybelle lived for some time in the home of her friends, the MacLeods, and there, when the MacLeods moved to Roxbury she went up to see her mother. He said he had never met her and did not know her."

MAYBELLE LETTERS

McDonald said that the chief reason MacRitchie was not at the trial was because he was bringing letters written home by Maybelle to her father—letters which the authorities believe may have some information valuable to them.

"When the Attorney General of Nova Scotia asked us if he could be of any help, we wired him we wanted Maybelle's letters home," said the assistant district attorney. "He replied, to our surprise, that MacRitchie already had them. And so we sent him so as to be sure they were not mislaid or lost."

"During our questioning of the slugger and coach, an inspector went through many of the letters, but found nothing of any importance."

"We were interested to know why MacRitchie accompanied the body home. He is a second cousin, and he explained that two sons of his in Nova Scotia were using him for a long time to take a trip home to see them and he thought he would go along, he said."

"We went over MacRitchie's story with him. MacRitchie told us that on the night of the murder he went straight home from work as usual, and that he was about 4:30 at home and that he was alone."

WENT TO GROCER'S

"He went to a grocery store to get five cents that he owed on some groceries purchased the night before, and he bought some cigarettes. When he was over to the store, he saw a man who he knew as a neighbor, and he went in to see him. He was about 5 o'clock, and he was alone."

"He was told that the police were running down many clues, some of which might possibly prove of importance. He shook his head wearily, and McDonald walked up to the door of the house."

McDonald revealed today that an eighteen-year-old man, living in Holman street, directly opposite his home where Maybelle Marshall was murdered, has been questioned at the police station.

STUDENTS' SUICIDES LAID TO COLLEGE PHILOSOPHY

HUB TEACHERS SAY RELIGION IS LACKING

Philosophy as taught in many American universities was blamed today by some high school teachers of the lack for the fast-growing enrollment of college students in the "Bulldog" class of 1927.

The latest of these were Richard Starr Ostermeyer, Yale sophomore and nephew of Samuel Ostermeyer, noted trial lawyer, the last being Bernard Ostermeyer, 29-year-old freshman at Minkin University of Chicago.

Some students who have killed themselves since New Year's, took their lives because the philosophy they were taught had been stripped of God and religion, according to the professor's death.

Varying with him, another authority declared that the wave of student suicides has "suggestion" as a note, the first suicide suggesting death to another student, and Please Turn to Page 5, Column 2.

SHOT TWICE IN NORTH END

Amelio Orlando of Prince street, North End, was taken from the home of Mrs. Mary Pasandro, Fourth street, Cambridge, early today, dangerously wounded with two bullets in the abdomen. He is at the Middlesex Hospital, Cambridge, in a serious condition.

There is mystery in the shooting. Orlando says he was attacked by two men at 4 o'clock this morning in front of a restaurant in Causeway street, opposite the North Station. But the fact that his coat and vest revealed bullet holes indicate that he did not have them on and the police are investigating.

Orlando says he hired a car and went to the home of Mrs. Pasandro and called a physician. The latter sent him to the hospital. Cambridge police will question the woman and Orlando will be grilled.

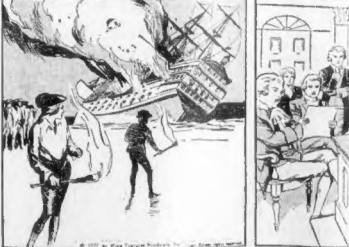

The rich Mrs. Grish is trying to get Amelio away from Uncle Sam. A red herring is the story. LITTLE SENE ROONEY begins in most Boston's Boston Evening American.

GIRL, 13, KILLED FOR HER WHITE DRESS AND SHOES

NAME. FIVE. (A.P.)—Four bodies members of a dance known as the "Strawberry Corset," with a record of previous murders in and around Mexico, were sentenced to death today. Five others, including four women accomplices, were given ten years imprisonment. In many cases the only motive was to secure the victim's clothing. The most recent was the murder of a thirteen-year-old girl who was killed in a dance hall in Mexico. She was killed for her white dress and shoes. The bodies were found in a ditch today. Five others, including

GIRL ON STAND IN TRIAL OF WINTERS

Woodstock, Vt., Feb. 3.—The calling of a nine-year-old schoolgirl as a witness at the murder trial of John C. Winters, accused of killing George Sullivan, was an unusual contribution that spurred the interest in the proceedings here today.

She was Miss Pauline Hoadington. Clerk Carl Fender was preparing to administer the oath when Judge Thompson, interrupted and suggested to the state attorney Robert Tait that he ask the child if she knew "No," the little girl answered "Yes," the little girl answered "Yes," the little girl answered "Yes."

"You know what telling the truth is," questioned the attorney. "Yes, yes," said the girl. "And you know why you should tell the truth?" "Because if I don't I won't go to Heaven," was the child's reply.

Judge Thompson told the clerk to proceed with the administration of the oath. The girl then testified. "I saw Winters," she testified. "I saw Winters," she testified. "I saw Winters," she testified.

The Hoadington girl was put on the stand to testify. She testified. "I saw Winters," she testified. "I saw Winters," she testified. "I saw Winters," she testified.

DECEASED SHOE TRACKS. Winters was one of the men who ran to the home of Miss Sullivan. He was one of the men who ran to the home of Miss Sullivan. He was one of the men who ran to the home of Miss Sullivan.

Darkness broke through the hunt for the woman's assailant. Darkwood burrs were found in the bed of the first woman and the slain girl. The police found the body of Winters when he was arrested.

Miss Evans, at whose home Miss Sullivan was attacked, will not be taken to testify and several witnesses, by alleged recognition of his voice, to the man who attacked her nurse. Miss Evans is so ill that her physicians will not permit her to be moved from Windsor.

Elmer Munroe, brother of Walter, Harry, Winchester, others whose names are near that of Miss Evans, told of hearing the screams of Miss Sullivan and the crashing of the door as her assailant broke through in his flight. None of these witnesses could give a description of the offender, they testified.

Miss Sullivan, who was found in the home, told of being attacked by the stranger. She was found in the home. She was found in the home. She was found in the home.

SUICIDES LEAD TO PHILOSOPHY TEACHINGS

these suicides imparting themselves to the study of the brain of a philosopher.

The French philosopher, J. J. Rousseau, philosophy at Boston College was the subject of a lecture by the natural sciences of philosophy as it is being taught in the country.

A lecture on present-day philosophy and its relation to the study of the mind and reason has been given.

"The philosophy teaching tends to destroy the mind and warps the mind of the student to such an extent that he believes the shining faith that dwells in the hearts of the founders of the country."

An example of this self-destruction of philosophy was shown recently at the University of Chicago, where a professor of philosophy was a professor of philosophy and a professor of philosophy.

It is a tragedy, a tragedy of philosophy at the University of Chicago, where a professor of philosophy was a professor of philosophy and a professor of philosophy.

"We have observed many times that a suicide in a family prompts another member of that family to contemplate self-destruction," he said. "The impulse to suicide is many, and needs only sufficient impulse of suggestion to bring about suicide."

One of two cases in a certain class of profession have frequently been followed by an epidemic which has been reported to date were among students of philosophy.

PLAN AUTO ROAD TO WORCESTER DIRECT

Plans for the construction of the proposed Worcester bypass, which is said to be nearly a direct road between Boston and Worcester, are being given consideration by the State Highway Department.

Nothing definite, however, has been decided on the project, although many complaints have been department every year because of the traffic congestion on the present Boston-Worcester route.

Every two months in the winter the congested and icy road between the two cities is a nightmare to motorists. The proposed Worcester bypass, it is said, would cut out the detour between the two cities.

GAS FUMES KILL FOUR MEN AT HOUSE PARTY

New York, Feb. 3 (A.P.)—Four men were found dead from gas poisoning in a house in Manhattan, Queens, today. They are Andrew L'Amore and Michael L'Amore, who lived in the house, and John L'Amore and John L'Amore, who were guests.

The bodies of the four men were found in the house today, and the cause of death was determined to be gas poisoning.

OPORTO TROOPS REVOLT, MARRIAL LAW IN SPAIN

Madrid, Feb. 3 (A.P.)—An article in the daily Bulletin from Oporto, Portugal, today says that a portion of the army in Oporto had revolted, but that a great part of the troops remained faithful to the government.

The article says that the revolt was a result of the government's failure to pay the troops, and that the government is now trying to suppress the revolt.

SIX MORE WOMEN KILLED IN SULU FORT ATTACK

Manila, Feb. 3 (A.P.)—A dispatch to the Daily Bulletin from Zamboanga today says that six more women have been killed since the attack on the island of Sulu.

The article says that the women were killed by the Sulu forces, and that the government is now trying to suppress the revolt.

Smith Case Off for Week

Washington, Feb. 3 (A.P.)—The Senate Judiciary Committee today postponed until next Wednesday the decision in the case of Senator Smith.

The article says that the committee is now trying to decide whether to impeach Smith, and that the decision will be made next Wednesday.

PARENT-TEACHER TRIBUTE TO MRS. HEARST

Los Angeles, Feb. 3 (Universal)—Parent-teacher associations throughout California paid homage to the memory of Mrs. Phoebe Hearst and Mrs. Theodore Barnard as the women who made possible the establishment of the national parent-teacher association.

The article says that the parent-teacher associations are now trying to establish a national parent-teacher association, and that Mrs. Hearst and Mrs. Barnard were the first to do so.

HOME LIFE REVEALED

INTEREST LACKING
Mildred Harris, first wife of Charlie Chaplin, gives inside view of Chaplin domicile.

CALLS CHAPLIN "PENNY WISE"

that was when his moods were upon him and he was lost in thought.

I think that every girl, when she dreams of her own home, wants the little domestic pleasures, even the little domestic worries, to be shared with her husband.

And that I had only now and then, Charlie's mood could change in an instant, so that he scarcely seemed like the same person who a moment before had been so loving and considerate.

At first it startled me and made me indignant, even when I told myself that it was "temperament" and to be expected in an artist like Charlie.

JUST DAILY LIFE

Later I came to see that it was just a part of daily life, something that Charlie could not help any more than I could help waiting long to turn on home the tenderest lover of our days of courtship.

Sometimes I would awaken in the night and hear him leaving the house, driven by his restless spirit, to wander off in the dark, thinking, observing, I would be awake and cry because he wanted to go away without me, waiting for hours for him to come back.

And then, many times, when he came back, he would be the old Charlie again, seeming to think only of me.

Once, if I remember, when I had "blue eyes" from too much work.

CHAPLIN WAS NOT INTERESTED IN PLANNING THE LITTLE THINGS OF THE HOME. HE WAS ALWAYS BUSY ON HIS FILMS. HIS WIFE, MILDRED, WAS THE ONLY ONE WHO COULD GET HIS ATTENTION AT ALL.

under the lights at the studio, but sat up all night, battling my eyes and comforting me. Again, physical suffering always troubled him.

SIGNED ALL CHECKS

He was careful about his household affairs. I do not mean that he insisted on knowing all the details of his household management, the bills and so on, but he knew what he thought was right as a standard of expense and if things went too much above that, he would know why.

Charlie signed checks for all bills, including my own. The household expenses were fairly large, but not extravagant. I had no fixed allowance. I charged everything I bought and Charlie gave me what other money I needed.

I would not call him penurious or even terribly economical. He was just careful in the affairs of his home, as he was at the studio. Perhaps his early years had made him realize the worth of money; those years when money was hard to get.

He never spent money on lavish entertainments, as so many Hollywood people do. That sort of thing did not appeal to him in the least.

Notes for editor: Evidence presented in the divorce court showed that during their two years of married life, Mrs. Mildred Harris Chaplin had had accounts in all the leading stores of Los Angeles and bought whatever she needed. That there were four and sometimes five servants in their home and that expenses were always liberal but never extravagant.

They averaged $12,000 a year. In the divorce Mr. Chaplin settled $100,000 on his wife and paid various legal and other expenses amounting to $7,300.

Tomorrow Mildred Harris will tell of Charlie's intimate friends, habits and favorite books. Charlie was in three or four short years from an ordinary vendor's actor at $50 weekly to a film star at $200,000 a year.

You'll like Uncle Bob and "LET-IT-ANNE HOOVER." Their heart-breaking adventures begin next Monday in the Boston Evening American. Watch for them.

Hub Turns Out For Two Fine Operas

By MOSES SMITH
BOSTON IS TAKING VERY well to opera again. When a Wednesday matinee can do practically a sellout business at the huge Boston Opera House, it is apparent that the capital of music is once again something more than a weak sister. And if "Faust" in the afternoon "spectacularly" and out the evening performance of "The Jewels of the Madonna" sold out "absolutely."

The crowds were rewarded with two good performances. "Faust" is an opera that needs good voices and good singing above anything else, and the Chalmers give these things in good measure. Edith Mason was her usual charming self as Marguerite, singing with one of the purest voices known in modern opera.

MISS MASON can generally be counted on to supplement her vocal excellence with a personal appeal quite fitting in the role of the sweet and innocent Marguerite. Similarly Charles Hackett as Faust, though not possessed of an exceptionally big operatic voice, is a most satisfying tenor.

Richard Russell, the young baritone who made a sensational appearance last year as Valentine, repeated his success. To COMPLETE a fine quartet Yvonne-Marcelle went through her role with no more heroics on the one hand, nor gibb matter-of-factness on the other, but with a feeling for the seriousness of the drama and the Of the other characters Martha was assigned to the ever capable Maria Cuccione, Siebel to Clara Shear, whose voice shows improvement, and Wagner to Guido Morelato, Frank St. Legor, a newcomer to Boston in the role of conductor, directed the orchestra and the performance as a whole with sound musicianship.

"THE JEWELS OF THE MADONNA" is a product of Wolf-Ferrari in the bloodiest manner, inspired, doubtless, by the success of "Padma" and "Cavaleria Rusticana." It is a thrilling and rather melodramatic performance. But the chief feature of interest for anyone at the performance was the glorious singing of Rosa Busa in the part of the hot-blooded Madeline. Singing in this fashion, Rosa takes her place as one of the world's great dramatic sopranos.

By BETTY ALDEN
WITH EXTREME BRILLIANCE, AND BEAUTIFULLY gowned and jeweled by its feminine attendants, the operatic pageant unfolds its glittering scroll. The fineness of the modiste, the bootmaker, the jeweler, and all that army of creators of beauties for the wardrobe of Milady, each plays a part to produce the nightly pageant.

Not even in the "good old days," when black velvet and diamond tiaras, stomachers and dog collars were the accepted opera array, could it have been more strikingly effective than now. Today Madame Modish turns to delicate fabrics, swirling chiffons, glistening sequins and exquisite bead work, to frocks the essence of smartness.

"Guilty"

Confession

By Jean McDonough

"I PLEADED WITH THE DOCTOR to keep me alive for just a few minutes more. I told him that I was a man, which meant I was a human being. He's pretty good at his job," the doctor said. "A human being has a brain, a lung, it's a woman has a uterus. I gave him something to eat and I told him I gave him to have no more. I told him the name of the man who killed Jack Ruby. I'll give him a witness—that's all I can do," the doctor answered, rather disinterestedly.

"WHILE THE DOCTOR WAS busy with his patient, I nervously paced back and forth in the waiting room. I wanted to know what was going on, but I didn't want to bother him. After a few minutes the doctor motioned to me to come over. 'Get the information, quickly or you'll never get it from that man,' he warned.

"THE STRANGER SAT UP IN bed. The stimulant the doctor had given him was working. He saw in his mind a picture of a man with a white beard and a long white hair. He knew it was a man who had been in the hospital for a long time. He looked at the man and he broke the news. He said,
"I don't look like a murderer, do I?"
he said, but I did kill a man."
